This is how you do it Raw leather jewellery can be made in different ways. Mostly by cutting leather pieces for either bracelets or a pendant. Sew the leather together using cross stitch. Attach a clasp and a pendant.

1 Cut a 3cm wide piece of leather in an appropriate length for a bracelet. Fold the piece of leather and punch small holes along the edge with a pair of revolving punch pliers.

2 Fold the edges towards the middle so the holes are opposite each other and sew with cross-stitches (cross) along the whole piece either with sewing thread or silver-plated wire.

3 Make a small hole in each side of the ends and attach a large round jump ring and clasp. Glue the ends together. Attach a pendant in the middle with a round jump ring.
